WASHINGTON.

Washington, Jan. 13.-A very prominent Republican is reported as saving: "If the Republican party had a leader it might regard itself as certain of victory in 1880. But it should be a leader who would lead who would march forward instead of backward. The notion that Grant is the best man for the party is absurd. His nomination would signify to the country simply that the party does not mean to move forward-that it has nothing to offer. Grant would be an old candidate with dead issues. A leader is wanted in harmony with the times. There is an opportunity without a man. If Hayes to-day is not the most popular man in the country, it is because he is bampered by hostile party magnates. He

"On the old platform Grant is stronger than Conkling, Blaine, Sherman, Washburne or anybody else. Hence no one heeds the rumors that have been circulating that New York and Maine Senators have withdrawn from the contest. But with a new policy, such as it ought to present adequate to the wants and situation of the country, Grant is impossible, and the man who placed himself at the head of this new policy would naturally be nominated."

Squelches His Traducers.

National Associated Press to the Star. BROOKLYN, Jan. 13.-Rev. Talmage devoted his sermon yesterday to his critics.

He took his text from St. Mark 13, 34: "To every man his work." Said he: There are now in the world one thousand three hundred and seventy-seven million people, and consequently one thousand three hundred and seventy seven million fields of usefulness. No individual can do the work of anybody else, and if a man neglect his work, it is done forever. To every man his work. I will not hide the fact that it is has been the chief ambition of my ministry to apply the religion six thousand years old to the present day, and the religion I want to preach is the religion that bruises the serpent's head. The ser-pent's head must be bruised. I hate him, and I never see his head but I throw some-thing at it. That is what I have been try-ing to do, to bruise his head, and every time I bruise him he hisses, and the harder I bruise him the louder he hisses. The best papers in the country now allow me, week by week, to preach repensance and peace, all over the earth. To the secular press of these two cities I give my thanks for their kindness, and after that I publicly thank the New Haven Palladium, New Haven Courier and Journal, Providence Star, Boston Globe, Washington Post, Cincinnati Enquirer, Cincinnati Commercial, Cincinnati STAR, St. Louis Journal, New Orleans Democrat, and Tal-mage gave the names of about fifty other papers, which had given him more or less space. Then he continued: I thank my friends, I thank my enemies, but there is a falsehood that invades the sanctity of my house. It has been stated over and over again in private circles and in newspapers that sixteen or seventeen years ago I went sailing on the Schuylkill River with my wife and sister, when suddenly that boat capsized, and that having opportunity of

make the law help me. [Applause.] Tal-mage then went into details as to how the calamity occurred. It was not his wife's sister, but his own sister by blood relation. His present wife was not within a hundred miles of the place, and so far from being sisters they were entire strangers and never heard of each other. Not until nine months after that tragedy did Talmage know of the existence of his present wife. She was in-troduced to him then by her brother, a cler-gyman, by name of Avery.

"What do you think," said Talmage, excitedly, "husbands and wives, fathers, mothers, editors and reporters, of a lie like that, manufactured out of whole cloth? I never have spoken of this subject before, and never shall again, but I give fair notice that if any two responsible witnesses will give me the name of any responsible person af-firming this slander. I will pay the inform-er $100 reward, and I will put upon the criminal vagabond and loathsome and ac-cursed wretch who utters it the full force of the law." [Applause.]

Disastrous Break-up Anticipated in the Lower Ohio.

THE ICE MOVES AND NO DAMAGE.

This morning's reports show that the various streams are rising rapidly. The ice in the Upper Ohio River has already been broken by the rising river at different points. The rise of water which came out of New River did considerable damage in the Kanawha River and on its way down the Ohio. At Maysville it left the ice and began to get here last night, and at noon today the river was climbing the bank at the rate of 2½ feet per hour, with nearly twenty-eight feet of water in the channel.

The levee presented a lively scene, and a large number of people stood about anxiously awaiting for the ice to break, but nothing of that kind happened up to a late hour this morning. The towboats have succeeded in breaking the ice about the harbor, and if the ice moves it will probe. harbor, and if the ice moves it will probably do very little damage here. Steam-boatmen now look for another rise out of the New River, which will raise the Kana-wia again and break the gorge extending from its mouth up to Buffalo, a distance of twenty-one miles
